Presented by: Alejandro Leguizamo, Ph.D.

Please indicate True or False for each question:

1. Approaching clients empathically contributes to the development of the therapeutic relationship.
2. Unconditional positive regard involves accepting all our clients do and have done.
3. According to the literature, we tend to be less empathic with people who are different from us.
4. When meeting with new clients, addressing cultural differences between them and us is contraindicated since it could startle them.
5. It is not necessary to raise issues of culture if our client is White.
6. When it comes to addressing issues of SES in treatment it is better to frame them in terms of experience rather than income differences.
7. I will at some point in the future commit microaggressions with clients.
8. If microaggressions go unaddressed, they could lead to non-compliance with treatment.
9. Only microaggressions committed by the therapist can lead to relationship ruptures in group treatment.

10. It is best to acknowledge microaggressions, apologize, and work on avoiding them.
